Info Items

SAD is a form of depression. For the people who are affected, the symptoms will begin this time of year as we lose light. Ann has a hand out with several ways to treat SAD which includes using lights, photo therapy, walking, sometimes a prescription, open blinds, trim tree branches, get outside, exercise, stress mgmt. activities.

Things to help with symptoms: biological clock, going to bed at a decent time and waking up regularly at the same time.

No way to prevent it. Plan ahead. Happens to older people more often.

How to help – pay attention to others who may have suicidal tendencies, absences from school, work or other regular activities. Visit your M.D. to diagnosis by physical exam and sometimes Vitamin D levels.

Ann will email the link to Mayo Clinic for further information.

President’s Report – please read.

Ann Wales – Williams Lecture Series on Thursday, December 1st at 7pm in the Community Center

Free event focuses on immigration. The Lecture Committee needs a student representative along with a faculty / staff member. The Williams Lecture Series was revived about 3 years ago, when Wendy, widow of William established funds to have lectures that will encourage and invite community discussion. Student attendance (1993) is needed.

Birthday celebration for Susan Resz.

Discussion

CCI players – Laura Hamilton and Ben Kaufmann.

Laura and Ben presented information from the conference they attended about placement piloting new ideas from Dr. John Hetts. It is believed that student’s underestimate their scores. Laura presented a review of cut scores.

Amanda – gave an explanation about the math curriculum and new pathway to university.

Fall term unveiled double enrollment into math 95 enrollment was down in math 20 and 60. Math dept created documents with math problems to give to students (online) so they can figure out where they belong. To ask the question “What math are you ready for ??” GED scores – we are using recommendations from the state. It has been found to cause both emotional and financial stress to be in basic and work towards university.

The members of the College Council participated in an Interactive experience – attendees become students and instructors

Discussion has happened in the past on this topic, but still need to get to the heart of the matter.

Attendees divided into groups (students and advisors) there were handouts for each group to follow.

Each group was paired up (student/advisor) dialogue ensued between student and advisor using the handout.

OCCC CoCo Minutes 11/4/16
Attendees switched roles.

Debrief of Interactive Experience – Laura Hamilton

2012 Advisors – overwhelming. No time to acknowledge student situation. Get right to scores. Fear factor by advisor. Concrete. This is the way it is. Was in a maze and didn’t understand where it was going. At least there was an answer.

2016 – didn’t know my ability. Advisor – asking students to know who they are. Student felt empowered because they could see what they would be learning. Modeling a way (analytical). Avg advising time is one hour with students. Students get the opportunity to be more self-reflective.
